

Italy already had a long tradition of marinating fresh peaches in wine before Giuseppe Cipriani started bartending at Harry's Bar in Venice (a favorite haunt of Ernest Hemingway), but it was his creativity that took the concept to new heights when he mixed white peach purée with sparkling Prosecco and birthed the now famous Bellini in 1948.

The drink instantly became a classic.

Giuseppe reportedly named the popular Bellini after Giovanni Bellini, a 15th century Venetian painter.
